because the command names are stored in data/loc/locale.bin which contains all strings for all languages (eg eng_us.db, ita.db) and contains the locale.dat file. (VVG) Actually, as I wrote, all you can really know about a language is what language you are using on your computer. It can be Russian, Chinese, English, German, etc., but ultimately all these language files are stored on your system. (VVG) I'm not saying this is bad here, because there are actually three other ways to organize data, and each has its own strengths and weaknesses. (W.W.G.)
