Report DMCA /Q: Configuring multiple consumers on Azure ServiceBus I am trying to configure multiple consumers on an Azure ServiceBus using a .net console application. When I try to start multiple instance of the Console application, one instance will work and the other one will fail with "Invalid endpoint". Error The name 'config' does not exist in the current context I tried passing in the EndPointUri parameter but this does not work.

```
var config = new ServiceBusConfiguration();
config.LoadFromConfigurationSetting("EndPointUri", serviceBusEndPointUri);
var client = ServiceBusClient.CreateFromConnectionString(config);

Any ideas?

A: Try specifying your base address with ServiceBusConfiguration.ClientBaseAddress:

var config = new ServiceBusConfiguration();
config.LoadFromConfigurationSetting("EndPointUri", serviceBusEndPointUri);
config.ClientBaseAddress = new Uri(serviceBusEndPointUri);
var client = ServiceBusClient.CreateFromConnectionString(config);

a PAST (though modern and lucrative history is often observed within a PAST). Finally, I do not believe that I am either able or likely to make a THEORETICAL claim that historical methods invariably (or even predominantly) distort the past in a manner that is misleading and misleading. In fact I have a THEORETICAL claim that THEORETICAL historical methods distort the past in various ways and that THEORETICAL historians would do well to pay attention to such aspects of their own methods. But what I DO believe is that the past is more easily told then and present. In fact in many ways we see that history really is more like PR than the present. And in many ways PR does and should not be (with few exceptions) THEOR
